[The subsequent communication contains many judicious and important observations on the subject of LIBEL S.]

Opus nihil, magna materies.

Free enquiry, indulged in matters of political concern, is the soul of a free government. Without it liberty cannot exist, and while sufferance is given to this inestimable privilege, oppression cannot be extreme. The toleration of political discussion is, in fact, but another name for liberty itself: for where is the region, which recognizes their distinction? Or where shall we find them severed by a momentary separation? Their being is co-existent, their origin and death must be co-eval. Every great and enlightened government will foster this privilege, and, from the nature of things, it cannot but induce freedom and security, and give stability to the rights of mankind. Oppressors seek to envelope themselves in secrecy and gloom, while liberty and enquiry tends to disclose all that is transacted. They strive to bury their subjects in the profundity of ignorance, while this great enlightener, penetrates every recess, and illuminates the mind with the rays of celestial truth. Information is the great guard against every encroachment, and there is no surer method of securing the rights of the people, than by perpetually reminding them of their liberties, and awakening them to every minute aggression which may lead to their usurpation. These sentiments are not singular: They may be fortified by the opinion of a great political writer, who declares, that if it was possible to introduce into the most arbitrary state, the freedom of enquiry, a portion of liberty must immediately follow; the increase of which would progress with the extension of this privilege.

Happily this great point is secured to us; and I feel a confidence in saying, that we have spirit to preserve it, and prudence to regulate its enjoyment. We will not easily surrender this invaluable right, neither shall it be used as the vehicle of unmanly detraction. The freedom of the press is one of the great items in our constitution, and whatever may be the opinion of some men, the sedition act did but render it the greater blessing. We glory in a fair investigation of the acts of public men, but we seek not to injure them and ourselves by false insinuations. We enjoy not, at present, the benefit of this improvement, and in consequence engage with less advantage: But our rulers cannot take offence at animadversions on their conduct, since they are the great advocates of toleration, and sticklers for the unlicensed freedom of discussion. In name they are the purest of republicans; to be such in fact, we ask no more from them than a confirmation of our present enjoyments, without improvements and without corrections. The privilege of complaint, we hold to be the most excellent and valuable of these enjoyments; but I tremble for their consistency, when I reflect that they are to be objects and not authors of public reprehension. They are impatient for the reign of philosophy and emancipation, and their masters have declared, that this is to be brought about solely by liberty of sentiment. They must then leave us the right of divulging our opinions; and perhaps we may aid them in the accomplishment of their object, and assist in crushing the monstrous wretch. — But...they are men, in possession of power, and invested with the ensigns of authority. Like the rest of mortals they must be pleased with dignity, and are not willing that their integrity or wisdom should be for a moment disputed. — Yet they cannot be infallible; and when we see them mistake, we cannot, nor should not, refrain from telling them their errors. If these truths be allowed, I fear we shall see our patriots lose sight of principle, act the apostate, and feeling power they will forget right. — But can condor advance such an opinion of men, who have declared themselves such disinterested republicans? To this question I will oppose another, and will then proceed to give my answer. What sort of candor is meant in this interrogation? Common or philosophical candor? If the latter, then candor cannot yield to this sentiment. — But if the good old candor of ancient days be alluded to, then I aver—that candor must hold to this opinion, for the experience of ages has proved that it is correct.

Americans, be not deceived, If the federal administration found it necessary to check the license of abuse, the other will find it no less so, supposing them to be equal in talents and integrity; but if they prove inferior, and their operations become the objects of aspersions; we are to look not for sedition act; but inquisitorial decrees: Then we shall see that common law, whose adoption by his country, was some few months ago disputed universally applied as a corrective of the press and the tyrannical doctrine of libels adhered to; the overthrow of which was one of the consequences of the reprobated sedition bill. The inconsistency is nothing; remember their former object was to destroy administration, their present is to confirm its existence. The law of libels is monstrous, though constitutional, and should it ever be executed upon us, I trust we will have energy enough to strive at a reform. We will not submit to the lacerations of a weapon, which generosity forbade us to use against our adversaries. — Not! The liberty of the press is our most valuable right; but this liberty is nothing if fettered by the tyranny of the law of libels, and surely we will not be robbed of our best privilege without one effort to preserve it. Remember we have been told, that a virtuous government need no sedition act to support it, and that the public sentiment would ever do it justice: If hereafter these men should advocate laws more binding and severe, suspect their integrity; challenge their disinterestedness and oppose with the ardor of freemen the infringement of your rights. — If our place men should adhere to the spirit of our constitution, I trust they would find a supporter in every member of the federal body. Federalists would never be induced to join in opposition to men, whose demeanor displayed a respect for our chartered privileges: But on the contrary, they would afford a stable support to administration, and in the moment of trial and danger, they would rally round the constituted authorities, they would brave every peril in their defence, and one common ruin should involve them and the independence of their country. — If this disposition should be abused, by a marked contempt of our sentiments; if our rulers will pursue a system of politics, which shall endanger the grand pillars of our constitution; if, in the pursuit of visionary or philosophical theories, they forget that they are dealing with Americans; you will not tamely be imposed on—you will step forward in a noble defence of your country, and with a manly resistance oppose your zeal and patriotism to unconstitutional aggression. But it is to be expected, that the limits of decency and order will ever bound your defence, and that detraction will be proscribed from your censures—The public good being your aim, truth will be your weapon; and you will never so far forget yourselves as to become subjects liable to the penalties of a sedition act. Remember that you represent the dignity of a people, and if you should descend to shameful scurrility and unlicensed abuse, the national character suffers degradation—your firmness should be tempered with moderation—and when punishment not reformation is our object, you will not pass unnoticed the vicious defects of individuals. — At the present moment lay a secure but prudent hold on the charter of your liberties, when the storm of contention increases; seize with a decisive grasp, and let the whirlwind of destruction bear you off in company.

ADRASTUS.

Translated from late-FRENCH PAPERS

FOR THE PHILADELPHIA GAZETTE.

PARIS, 9th Messidor.

It appears more and more certain, that the French troops upon the right bank of the Rhine, will withdraw and return to the left bank! It is said that the motives which had occasioned that movement, no longer exist. It is also said, that several corps that had been marched towards the Rhine, are returning to their respective quarters.

The Count and Countess of Livourne, took their departure to day; they are going to Florence via Parma. The General of Division Grouchy is also going to wait upon them till they are out of the French territory.

The Batavian Directory have given leave unto the celebrated Vandernoat, one of the first leaders of the revolution in Brabant, in the year 1789, to remain in Holland, under the inspection of the municipality of the place where he may reside.

The great Parade that took place on last Quintidi, was one of the most brilliant we have as yet witnessed. The troops were not more numerous than usual, but the Chief Consul caused them to go through several manoeuvres, which were performed with an astonishing degree of skill and precision. There was on the same day a dinner at the Thuilleries, where the following persons were invited, viz. the Count de Livourne; Cardinal Causalvi, count de Schock, captain of the king of Prussia's gendarmes, who sat at table by the Chief Consul; the staff officers lately returned from the armies; such Prefects as are upon leave at Paris, several Ministers and State Counsellors, and other public functionaries.

Mr. Murray, minister plenipotentiary of the United States, presented Mr. Story, a citizen of said States, to the Chief Consul.

The Prefects of La Meurthe, Jura and Haute Saone, have informed the Minister of Police of the arrestation of sundry emigrants, who had not obtained leave for entering the French territories.

They talk of a new philosophical paper which is to make its appearance the first of next month, the title of which is to be The Avidote. Should the persons who are mentioned to be the editors, our saints of the day will be put to a new test.

They write from Dijon that there is a report there, that a considerable body of troops are expected, in order to be employed about the finishing the canal of Cote d'Or; but this grateful intelligence is, as yet, unsupported by any official measure.

COPENHAGEN, 25th July.

General Macdonald, Minister from the French Republic, arrived here with his suit this afternoon.

The Medal which has been made upon the memorable affair of the 2d of April, and distributed among our warriors, exhibits on one side a ship, fitted after the Gothic style; upon her is to be seen a Lion, holding with one of his claws the Denmark coat of arms, and a pillar with the other; the following motto is affixed above, "our courage is our defence," and at the bottom, "THE SECOND OF APRIL!" — Upon the other side of the Medal are to be seen a Royal Crown, surmounting the sceptre and sword, with this motto, "Our King honors us—our Country evinces her gratitude;" the name of the warrior decorated with this honourable distinction, is engraven upon the medal.

AUGSBURG, July 26.

If the indemnities which the Grand Duke is to receive in Germany are such as stated in some late journals, it is obvious that this Prince, whose dominions are to be contiguous to those of the head of his family, will have good reason to be pleased with the arrangements made between the Great Powers, in order to reconcile the dispossessed Princes to their fate.

The Bishoprick of Passau, which is worth more than 240,000 florins, exclusive of the Prebends in the Cathedral, respecting which all rights belonging to sovereignty, will, without doubt, be exercised, will prove to its new sovereign a fertile, pleasant, and well-watered country, containing a stately city upon the banks of the Danube, at the confluence of the Inn and Ilz. The conflagration it experienced in the year 1662, caused it to be built again, and to be adorned with beautiful buildings after the modern taste, and universally admired.

The Inn-Viertel, or District of Inn, a part of which was ceded to Austria by Bavaria, in 1799, contains 6 bailliwickes, viz. Braunau, Schaerdingen, Ried, Mauerkirken, Wildshut and Friburg. Braunau is a well built city, though badly fortified; it is situated upon the Inn. Schaerdingen upon the same river, is well fortified and has a fortress. The city and county of Ried carry on a valuable commerce, chiefly in linens. Mauerkirken, upon the river Mattigis, as well as Wildshut and Friburg, peopled by husbandmen.

The Arch-Bishoprick of Salabourgh, which alone constitutes the main item among the indemnities granted the Duke, by the treaty of Luneville, contains forty bailliwickes, 250,000 inhabitants, and yields an yearly income of about four millions of florins. This country sustained a heavy loss in the year 1732, when all such as were not catholicks were compelled to go and settle in foreign countries. The representations of the protestants, supported by Sweden, Denmark, England and Holland, had but too slow an effect; thirty thousand Saltzburghers had already left their houses, and the Baron de Genilotti, whom the court of Vienna had sent to stop the consequences of a disastrous law, did not arrive in time. The capital, which contains fifteen thousand inhabitants, is known to be one of the finest cities in Germany; it contains stately palaces, occupied by the Archbishop and Canons, besides valuable monuments of antiquity.

STRUTTGARD, July 30.

They are now fortifying the city of Juliers, agreeably to directions, and plans given by General Chauchier, of the engineers, who, during a tour he has taken, by order of his government thro' the four annexed departments, stayed chiefly at Juliers, in order minutely to examine the situation of the place.

BRUXELLES, 7th Messidor.

Several letters received at this place both from Upper Germany, and from the banks of the Wafer and Lower Rhine, are positive in stating that nothing further is said respecting the evacuating of the electorate of Hanover and of Bremen, by the Prussian army, under the command of general Kleist; all preparations to this effect have entirely ceased, a change which no one can account for.

NEW-YORK, October 8.

It appears from the following Report of the Resident Physician, that there is no great cause of alarm among our fellow citizens. This report is an important one, because it exhibits the true state of the fever—and we hope we shall occasionally be made acquainted with the health of the city from the same authentic source, as it will tend to "contradict false and exaggerated stories," which, on such occasions, are circulated with industry, and too readily believed by the credulous.

From the absence of Malignant Fever beyond the time of its accustomed appearance, and from the very advanced period of the season, there was good reason to hope that no real necessity would have occurred for the subscriber to take any public notice of its existence among us. — The present condition of the city, however, renders it proper, in the judgment of the Resident Physician, to contradict false and exaggerated stories, and to report to the Citizens far as has come to his knowledge, the real and undisguised truth.

It stands thus—Since about the middle of last month, to the present day, from East-Rutger street along the East river chiefly, but in almost every quarter of the city, there have appeared cases of Fever, which, in many instances, have terminated fatally, and in some very suddenly, exhibiting all the common characters of Yellow Fever.

From the 1st inst. as accurately as I have been able to collect 35 persons have died of this fever—those which I have sent to the La Fayette on Staten Island not being included in this account. Some who now labor under this disease, and have been considered dangerously ill, have a fair prospect of recovery; and there is every reason to expect, that as the disease does not appear to spread, a favorable change of weather will soon cause its entire extinction.

JAMES TILLARY, Resident Physician.

October 9.

Arrived—Brig Jupiter, Cranford, Jamaica; sch'r Christian, Miller, do.; sloop Mary-Ann, Addison, Richmond.

Cleared—Ship Atlas, Wilton, Lisbon; Augusta, Hughes, N. Orleans; brig Enterprize, Rea, Havana; Ceres, Tucker, Bermuda; sch'r Tryal, Terry, Cape-Francois.

Capt. Miller, from Jamaica, spoke the Friends, from Jamaica to New-York, out 40 days. Saw a ship under jury masts standing for Virginia.

Capt. Cranford from Jamaica, spoke brig 3-Friends, Ripley, 36 days from Kingston, who put into Norfolk, in distress. Also, ship William, Pennock, 50 days from Kingston, bound to Norfolk, had not arrived when the Jupiter failed.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 9.

Arrived, Brig Betsey, Cook, Cape-Francois; sch'r Mary-Ann, Hudgins, Virginia.

Ship Industry from Lisbon to this port, was spoken a few days since, out 60 days from hence.

Sch'r Nonpareil, Burroughs, of and from this port to Havana, was carried in to New- Providence, released immediately and was to sail from thence about the 2d September.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 10.

Agreeable to public notice, a number of gentlemen met at Mr. Evans's yesterday evening, to take into consideration measures to effect the navigation of the river Susquehanna, when it was unanimously agreed that a subscription be opened for the purpose of raising a sum of money to be applied towards removing the obstructions between the Pennsylvania line and the head of the tide, which will admit with ease and safety the produce of that extensive river to the town of Baltimore. To effect so desirable an object, the citizens will be waited upon in a few days for subscriptions, when it is to be hoped a spirit of liberality will be evinced, equal to the importance of the undertaking.

Arrived.—Sloop Friendship, captain Fleetwood, 46 days from Jamaica; coffee and cotton.

Left there, Feb. Virginia, captain Edwards, of Baltimore, to sail in 4 days.

Schooner Isabella, captain of Wilmington, (N.C.) brig William, capt. Leach, of Hamburg. Sailed in company with the brig Mohawk, of and for New-York, and sloop Amazonia, of Wilmington, (Del.) for Aux Cayes.

Spoke, in lat. 34, 10, long. 75, 29, the brig Speedwell, of and for Salem, from New Orleans, out 24 days, who, two days before, fell in with an English brig, that had, as prizes, the brigs Washington and Columbia, of Charleston, from Port Republic, and scho. Polly, of and from Wiscasset, bound to Charleston.

Saw three schooners on shore between Cape Hatteras and Cape Henry.

Alexandria Advertiser.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 13.

The following article is copied from the (N. York) Mercantile Advertiser of the 9th instant:

"The United States frigate Bolton got under way yesterday morning, about nine o'clock, from her moorings in the East river, to anchor in the North river, and, in turning the point of the Battery ran upon a reef of rocks. Fifteen of her guns and some spars being taken out of her, it is supposed she will be got off at high-water, without much damage."

Captain John Striker, is appointed naval agent for Baltimore, in the room of Archibald Campbell, esquire.

The British sloop of war Pheasant sailed from Bolton for Halifax on Sunday the 4th inst.

A gentleman writes from Charleston, under date of Sept. 22—"You may inform your neighbours that the sickness continues to rage here with great violence. I hope nothing will induce them to add our long list of mortality."

A letter from New-York, dated the 8th inst. says—"The alarm here respecting the fever is great; the stores and counting-houses in the lower part of the city, near the Coffee-House are generally closed, and business has received a sensible blow."—The report of the Resident Physician, of New-York, relative to the sickness at that place, will be found under the New-York head, in this day's Advertiser.

The report of a malignant fever having prevailed at New-Bedford, has caused a respectable committee of that place to publish a report on the subject, in which they state, "that from the 1st September to the 1st October only eleven deaths have occurred in that village, and that seven of them were of a fever; besides which seven persons have been sick of the fever, and have recovered, two only remained sick at the last date."

From a Democratic Newspaper published in Salem, (Mass.)

The editor has been credibly informed that a respectable gentleman, on reading A. Campbell's communication in our last, remarked (we must allow with a just indignation) that he was knowing, at the time Mr. Pickering was disarmed from office, of money being transmitted to him, at his request, to pay his baker's, his brewer's and his landlord's bills, previous to his quitting Philadelphia. We have forborne publishing a second publication of CAMPBELL's on the same subject, for the same reason—and we earnestly solicit a statement of facts which the above gentleman has verbally reported, which we will publish with pleasure in the Register. Sentiments or assertions of a critical designation, so admissible of evidence in their own nature, lead reasonable men to suspend any determinate judgment. Caudor, however, must lead us to observe, that among the faults, or foibles, which in common with all other men, col. Pickering may be allowed to sustain, want of integrity and probity have never been in the number.

M. Laharpe, author of the Cours de Literature, gives the following fact, which may serve to moderate the vanity of young dramatic writers:—"Since the time of Racine, about one thousand new pieces have been brought out in Paris, and of these (exclusive of Voltaire's compositions) scarcely thirty still keep possession of the stage!"

TREATY BETWEEN SPAIN & PORTUGAL.

FROM THE NATIONAL INTELLIGENCER OF YESTERDAY.

[We this day present a copy of the Treaty between SPAIN and PORTUGAL, translated for the National Intelligencer. This authentic article is the more important, as it determines the real contents of this instrument, so variously reported by European Gazettes.]

OFFICIAL.

Treaty of Peace and Friendship between the most high and powerful Lords Don Carlos IV. King of Spain, and Don Juan, Prince Regent of Portugal, and the two Algarves, signed at Badajoz the 6th June, 1801.

ARTICLE I.

There shall be peace, friendship and good correspondence between his Catholic majesty the king of Spain, and his royal highness the prince regent of Portugal, and the two Algarves, by sea and land, through the whole extent of their kingdoms and dominions; and all captures which may be made at sea after the ratification of the present treaty, shall be bona fide restored, as well as all merchandise and effects, or their respective value.

ART. II.

His royal highness shall shut the ports of all his dominions to the vessels in general of Great Britain.

ART. III.

His Catholic majesty shall restore to his royal highness the cities and settlements of Jurumena, Arronches, Portalegre, Casteldevide, Barbacena, Campo-Mayer, and Ouguela, with all their territories hitherto conquered by his arms, and which may be conquered; and all the artillery, mortars, and other munitions of war found in the said garrisons, cities, towns and places, shall also be restored according to the state in which they were at the time of their delivery; and his catholic majesty shall keep in the quality of a conquest, to be forever united with his dominions and subjects, the fortresses of Olivenza, its territory and inhabitants, as far as the Quadiana; so that this river shall be the boundary of the respective kingdoms in that part which only washes the aforesaid territory of Olivenza.

ART. IV.

His royal highness the prince regent of Portugal and the two Algarves shall not consent that there shall be upon the frontiers of his kingdom deposits of prohibited and contraband goods, which may prejudice the commerce and interests of the crown of Spain, except those only which shall exclusively belong to the royal revenues of the Portuguese crown, and which shall be necessary for the consumption of the territory respectively on which they may be deposited; and if any infraction of this or any other article shall take place, the treaty which is now established between the three powers, including the mutual guarantee, as expressed in the articles of this present, shall be considered as void.

ART. V.

His royal highness shall satisfy without delay, and shall restore to the subjects of his Catholic majesty, all the loss and damages which they may justly claim, and which have been occasioned by British vessels, or by the subjects of the court of Portugal during the war with the latter or former power: and in like manner just satisfaction shall be given on the part of his catholic majesty to his royal highness for all captures illegally made by Spaniards before the present war, by means of an infraction of territory, or without cannon shot of the forts of the Portuguese dominions.

ART. VI.

Within the term of three months, computing from the ratification of the present treaty, his royal highness shall restore to the treasury of his catholic majesty, the costs which his troops left unpaid at the time of his withdrawing from the war with France, and which were occasioned by it, according to the accounts presented by the ambassador of his catholic majesty, or which may be now presented anew excepting nevertheless all errors which may be found in the said accounts.

ART. VII.

After the signature of the present treaty, hostilities shall reciprocally cease within the precise space of twenty-four hours; so that after this term no contributions shall be demanded from the conquered places, or any other measures taken, but those which are compatible with what is equally conceded to friendly troops in time of peace: and as soon as the same treaty shall be ratified, the Spanish troops shall evacuate the Portuguese territory in the precise term of six days, commencing the march twenty-four hours after notification of its being done, without committing in their passage any violence against the inhabitants, and paying for every thing they stand in need of at the prices current at that place.

ART. VIII.

All the prisoners made by sea or land shall henceforth be set at liberty and mutually restored within the term of fifteen days from the ratification of this treaty, paying in like manner the debts contracted during their detention.

The sick and wounded shall continue to be assisted in their respective hospitals, and shall be equally restored when they are able to march.

ART. IX.

His Catholic majesty obliges himself to guarantee to his royal highness the prince regent of Portugal, the entire conservation of his estates and dominions, without the least exception or reserve.

ART. X.

The two high contracting powers oblige themselves to renew henceforward the treaties of defensive alliance which existed between the two monarchies, with those clauses and modifications which the ties that now unite the Spanish monarchy to the French Republic nevertheless demanded; and the same treaty shall regulate the succours which shall be mutually afforded when an emergency shall so require.

ART. XI.

The present treaty shall be ratified in the exact space of ten days after its signature or before if possible. In faith of which we the undersigned Minister Plenipotentiary, and in virtue of the full powers with which for that purpose our august masters have supplied us, signed with our hands the present treaty, and cause it to be sealed with the seal of our arms.

Done at the city of Badajoz the 6th of June, 1801.

(Seal) The Prince of peace.
(Seal) Luis Pinto de Sousa.

HUMOUR.

During the present of session of the (British) Imperial Parliament, some of the members in opposition brought forward a violent motion censuring the administration, and for petitioning his majesty no longer to listen to the councils of his present ministers. Several members had declaimed in support of the motion, but none thought it worth their while to oppose it, when Mr. Robson, a member from Ireland, losing all patience, rose and said—

"When such a question as the present was before the house, it was more than human nature could bear to bear nothing but silence from the treasury bench. (A loud laugh.) He then adverted to Egypt, and to Russia, condemning the conduct of ministers respecting these countries, and contending that Great Britain had been really at war with Russia, ever since the expedition to Holland. He lamented the absence of a Right Hon. Gentleman (Mr. Fox) who absented himself from the house on account of his great abilities. (A loud laugh.) He said Gentlemen might laugh, but he thought it was not a subject of mirth, when talents were so much wanted in that house." (Another laugh.)

BILLY MOOR.

An honest tar, and fresh from sea,
With heart just where it ought to be,
Thus hail'd young Billy Moor:
"What cheer, my lad? Misfortune's gale
Hath torn, I see, thy tatter'd sail
For thou art wreck'd and poor."

The simple boy his story true,
Told, with a blushing sweetness too;
Then heav'd a heart-fick sigh!—
"But God is good though man's unkind;
Pain on... my sufferings never mind;
He soon will let me die!"

Jack's heart, with manly feeling yearn'd;
More than his purse in pocket burn'd;
And that for once was cramm'd;
Jack wip'd the spray from either eye—
"Die, Mollate!" was the tar's reply
"It thou dost, I'll be d—d."

"Bear up! I have thee safe in tow,
I'll fir thee straight to face the foe,
And cope with death d'yee see!"
He had him rigg'd the next spring tide,
His locker full and well supplied,
Bore Billy Moor to sea.

When there, the boy with grateful heart
Applauded, play'd his fluted part,
And scorn'd to flinch or run:
But oft would bless the happy day
That bore him from distress away
To serve Jack Mizen's gun.
